Students at Rangitoto Island

Trip to Rangitoto Island

by Steven Chen

We took the ferry and about 25 minutes later, we arrived at Rangitoto Island. The whole island looked narrow and long from the distance, however, it is round in shape and it is a volcano which formed 600 years ago. During the 600 years, many plants and trees have grown on the island. It was hard to walk on the track because the ground was rough. You could see stones which were formed by the cooling magma everywhere.

At the half way point to the summit track, there was a cave called "Lave Cave". Going into the totally dark cave, it was a really amazing and brand new experience. It was darker than night inside the cave and you could lose your way, so it was hard to find the exit. The rocks might hurt your feet or cut your shoes, but never was there such an amazing experience for me. I couldn't believe nobody wanted to go down with me. About 12 noon, we arrived at the summit. There were incredible views from the top. Only if there were fewer clouds, we could have had a better view. Auckland City could be seen quite clearly with the Sky Tower and Harbour Bridge well outlined.

We took a rest in the small bach and at about 3.20pm the ferry came. It had just started to rain when we returned on the boat finishing our excellent exploration of Rangitoto Island.

Mix & Mingle

Zoran and students

The mix and mingle activity was a great success on 19 October 2005. Students from different classes came together, sharing morning tea while finding answers to a questionnaire, given out by the Principal, on what they normally do in the weekend. It was also a good opportunity for English conversation!! Was it all in English?

Zoran, one of our teachers played the guitar, and his students presented a song called "Four seasons in a day". Everyone really enjoyed the singing and hope they can do this again.
